The pride of Northern Ireland

Scrutiny board to oversee £100m investment project

Deborah Brown, Lindsay Todd, Stephen Kirkpatrick, chairman, Patrick McClughan and Peter Toogood

Forde May Consulting, a Belfast based recruitment firm specialising in filling senior executive and board positions, has appointed a board to scrutinise a new £100m investment project agreed by the previous Executive.

The fund has been set up to help stimulate underperforming areas of the NI economy including real estate, regeneration and infrastructure.

The board will oversee the management of the fund by CBRE Capital Advisors.

The five members will be led by Stephen Kirkpatrick who will chair the board. He has held a number of prominent Non Executive roles and is currently chairman of the Board at BDO Northern Ireland.

He will be joined by Lindsay Todd, a previous equity partner at PwC and Patrick McClughan, CEO of Western Building Systems.

Currently director of finance and corporate services of the Executive Office, Peter Toogood brings substantial public sector experience to the board as does Deborah Brown, finance director for the Department for Communities.

"I'm delighted to come on board, alongside my highly experienced and committed colleagues, to oversee this positive investment in Northern Ireland projects," said Mr Kirkpatrick.

"Without a current Executive in place, it is important that plans and funds are still moving forward and progressing in Northern Ireland."
